

Moonshine Causes
Gun Display; Arrest

An overdose of fiery moonbeams made Carl Mau of Mokena think he was in the army Monday afternoon and he got a notion to shoot up his home. Along about 4 o'clock in the afternoon Mau's sick son Fred called up the village police saying the old man was on a rampage and asked for police help. When the officials arrived they discovered Mau in a very rebellious mood and armed with a 22 caliber revolver. He was placed under arrest and after a tussle landed in the village jail. Upon examination it was found that two shots had been fired. Two empty shells and 2 bullets were found in the revolver.

A jug and a bottle of moonshine were also found. Mau was ordered to appear before Judge John F. Schultz Tuesday morning and was fined $5 and costs and placed under a $100 peace bond.

Question—Where did the moonshine come from? Who is making and peddling it in Mokena?

Draws $200 Fine For Flourishing Gun

Last Friday Henry Martenson, late of Mokena who believes in enforcing his demands with a gun, was given a hearing in Joliet. A disorderly conduct charge preferred against him by his brother-in-law Mr. Creight of Joliet was heard and dismissed. Then Martenson appeared in the court of Judge Casey on two charges of using a gun with a threat to kill preferred against him by his wife who is suing him for divorce and by his brother-in-law. He was assessed a fine of $200 and costs.

MOKENA HIGH SCHOOL WINS HOT BASKETBALL GAME

On last Monday night, the basketball team of the Mokena high school played a piece of team of town boys in a very exciting and rather rough game. The Mokena high team showed more team play and it was due to this fact that they were able to pile up a 24-16 win. Only once during the game did the invading team threaten and that during the third quarter when the score stood 10-14. But the high school boys showed themselves master of the situation by quickly sinking three field goals thereby putting the game on ice. Hirsch for the losers played a fast clean, and strong game and clearly was their only consistent gainer. Knudson and diminutive Muehler shown for the High School. Muehler was high score for the evening with 11 points. On Friday, the High School team takes on the strong Frankfort team at Frankfort. A battle royal is expected. The high school does not expect to win against the more experienced Frankfort team, but the practice will be worth while for them.

SCHEER FARM AT FRANKFORT IN LIMELIGHT AGAIN

The Scheer farm east of Frankfort which has been much in the limelight since the Liberia Colored Colony promoters tried to buy it last year, is again in the public eye as the result of Fred L. Hasenjaeger filing a bill in the Will County Circuit court to quiet title to this property.

MRS. MECKLENBERG OF OAK LAWN PASSES AWAY

Mrs. F. Mecklenberg, aged 75 years died last Monday. Funeral services were held last Thursday afternoon from the home of her son Emil in Oak Lawn, Rev. Mr. Striford of the Lutheran church officiating. Burial in Bethania Cemetery. She is survived by three sons, one daughter, 6 grand children, and two great grand children.

OAK LAWN COMMUNITY CLUB TO PUT ON LINCOLN PROGRAM

The Community Club will hold a Lincoln program at the Community Club House on Feb. 12. There will be a community sing and a lot of other features.

Oak Lawn To Get Phone Exchange

Oak Lawn is about to have a telephone exchange of its own. The Bell Telephone Co., is laying a new 400 line cable. Nearly every home in Oak Lawn will have a phone. All wishing to sign telephone application may do so by either inquiring at Chamber of Commerce office or by seeing Mayor John T. Emery. Another big step of progress for Oak Lawn. Bully, keep it up!

OAK LAWN CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ELECTS OFFICERS

The Oak Lawn Chamber of Commerce met last Monday and elected the following officers:
President George T. Dutton.
1st Vice-Pres. Clarence Kreuger
2nd Vice-Pres. Harry Confer.
Treasurer, Carl Larson.
Secretary, John T. Emery.

GOLDEN RULE KEY TO GAIN

Anybody owe you money?
If so, you expect them to pay it as soon as their ability permits—a part of it, at least. And if you owe anybody a dollar, as an upright and square person, you make it a point to pay up the first chance you get. That's only human nature. The "golden rule of life", as it were.
Such is the gist of the message Oak Lawn's business and professional interests give you to-day in their educational campaign for a better and greater community. You'll find their talk, well emphasized by considerable sound logic, on the back page of this issue. Read it carefully. If everybody practices what these men preach, all Oak Lawn will be a great deal better off for it.

Try to Pay Promptly
"Do unto others as you would have them do unto you" was taught to all of us on our mother's knee. But, insofar as human nature varies considerably, none of us can truthfully say that we have always practiced that rule. We should however, make a special effort to live up to it in doing business—namely, paying our bills and expecting others to do likewise.
Without "cash on hand", no business can exist. And where can that cash come from, except that you and I pay up promptly—either when the goods are delivered to us or when the bill falls due. It takes money to make money and the business man must figure out where he's going to get his money to cover the cost of future production and overhead.

Merchant Loses Confidence
But, if you and I—and some times, through mere negligence, we have done it—fail to pay up our just bills, that business man will soon be worrying as to how he can continue to serve us and give us the quality of goods to which we have been accustomed. And, worst of all, if we keep him worrying about getting his cash, he'll soon lose interest in Oak Lawn and its residents and seek a better paying field elsewhere. Thus, not only for you but the whole town would lose a good friend and neighbor.

Paid up bills, indeed, add to the good name of Oak Lawn. The best feather we can have in our hat is to have the reputation that we're "square shooters"—always willing to do the right thing by others. And that includes—PROMPTLY MAKING GOOD THE DEBTS WE CONTRACT!

(The next of these educational broadsides from local interests will appear in this paper next month. Watch for it! Tell your neighbor!

Oak Lawn C. of C.
To Entertain

The Oak Lawn Chamber of Commerce the live wire organization is going to sponsor a program on the evening of Feb. 15. Radio stars will play big part in the program. Watch The News-Bulletin for further particulars.

BIBLE CLASS MEETS SAT. EVE

The Mokena Men's Bible Class will meet at the Mokena School Saturday night of this week. All men of the community are welcome.

Judge S. J. Drew Dies Suddenly

S. J. Drew, Judge of the Will County Probate Court was suddenly stricken at his home in Joliet last Friday evening following a stroke of apoplexy.

Judge Drew died within an hour after being stricken. He had been attending to the regular duties of the court and was only home a short time when stricken. His sudden death came as a big shock to his legion of friends in the county.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at the Richards St. M. E. church, Rev. I. E. Putnam and Rev. Thomas K. Gale, the latter a former pastor, officiated.

Members of the Will County Bar Association served in a body as honorary pallbearers. Active pallbearers were from the Joliet Commandery No. 4 of which Judge Drew was a member.

Dies In House He Was Born In 73
Years Ago

Lewis F. Gougar, 73 years old, a life long resident of New Lenox township, died Sunday in the same farm house in which he was born, November 15, 1852. He spent his entire life on this farm.

He was educated in the schools of New Lenox township and at Englewood. He served as school director in his district and also as commissioner of Highways of New Lenox township.

During the early days the post office was located in the Gougar home, Cornelius Van Horn acting as postmaster and constituted one of the stations between Danville and Chicago.

Near the residence of Mr. Gougar is an old Indian burying ground. Mr. Gougar's father had in his possession a German Bible which was printed in 1600.

Mr. Gougar was noted as a collector of Indian relics and souvenirs of frontier days, and had converted a section of his home into an informal museum. He spent his entire life on the old home farm.

Mr. Gougar is survived by his widow, two daughters, Mrs. Mary E. Allen, and Miss Elizabeth J. Gougar, a son David F. Gougar and a grand child Mary Ann Allen.

Mr. Gougar's father, John Gougar first located on the old homestead in the fall of 1830, and this property has been in the possession of the Gougar family ever since.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon, burial in Oakwood cemetery, Joliet.

MOKENA P. T. A. TO MEET FEBRUARY 9th

Put on your old grey bonnet with the blue ribbons on it and hitch up the proverbial one horse shay and prepare for the evening of your lives at the next regular meeting of the Mokena Parent Association February 9 at 7:45 P. M. Something entirely new and of interest to everyone will be put forth at this meeting. The plans are fast being completed and as soon as they are completed, look for them here in this space a week from today. Of only one thing have we been informed, and that is that everyone attending that evening is requested to bring their own pencil. Be sure that it has been sharpened and is ready for use. This invitation is extended to all, although you may not be members come and see what we are doing. You will be interested we are sure. Align yourself with a worthwhile project and see it grow.

OAK LAWN LOCALS
A very large crowd attended the buncos party held at St. Gerald's church. All had a good time. Refreshments were served.
The Oak Lawn Community Club collected over two tons of old papers in their recent drive which was sold, the proceeds going for the benefit of the club.
On account of the Oak Lawn items not arriving on time due to delay in mail service, they had to be held over for next week so look for a big budget next issue.

Rev. P. J. Geraghty Has Live Parishes

ST. GERALD'S CHURCH,
OAK LAWN, ILL.

Peter J. Geraghty, Pastor
St. Gerald's Parish smiles on oisy bees, but frowns on drones. Its motto is "Let us be up and doing". It has wonderful homes, husbands and wives, parents and children, boys and girls, school teachers village officials and business men. In May 1921 Father A. Martin of Glenwood, Ill., attempted a Mission there and abandoned it in Oct. 1921. At a meeting in the Mrs. N. and Miss H. Maar home Jan. 11, 1922 Oak Lawn's Mission was established by Rev. Peter J. Geraghty at the request of the Halls, Maars' Mullens' Brandts' O'Brien's, Papsts', Stevens', Walsh's, Wangers and Wrights'.

Services were conducted on Sundays at the Hall home, 95th & 52nd Ave., until June 1922. On the 4th of June the Mission was moved to the (Wm. Brandt & Sons Block 95th and Tully Ave, Oak Lawn. The rapid progress of the zealous congregation demanding larger quarters, in Nov. 1922 ground was broken for a church at 95th & Miniek on a lot owned by Father Geraghty. On April 29, 1923 St. Gerald's Church was formally opened for services by Father Geraghty. The congregation had accumulated $850. Mr. Hall, Mrs. Jos. F. Mullen and Father Geraghty adding $125 each, swelled the building fund to $1350.

Father Geraghty advanced the balance of the cost of the church donated liberally of his time and money to St. Gerald's and officiated gratis until the church was paid for Jan. 8, 1926. The Oak Lawn Catholics are great workers. Father Geraghty is named the peerless pastoral promoter of Oak Lawn.

ST. JAMES CHURCH Sag Bridge.

Our motto is "Pray on, for Prayer Perfects Things". On Jan. 17 the Sag Altar and Roseary Society directed a very successful entertainment at the Sag Hall. The many distinguished guests from the Sag, Palos, Lemont, Willow Springs and Oak Lawn had a pleasant time. Mrs. Julia Mallon, Mrs. W. J. Hartnett, Mrs. R. J. Banks, Mrs. R. Doenitz, Mr. T. J. Dalman and their excellent associates, demonstrated their ability to conduct a delightful entertainment. Under its new management with the co-operation of its wonderful people the Sacred Sag remains not in decay, not a mere antique, but a sanguine neoteric, full of life and youthful vigor.

Thousands See Palos Ski Meet

Anders Haugen, star of the Grand Beach Ski club and winner of the recent Cary meet, won class A honors, with a jump of 106 feet and a collection of 18.04 points, in the annual forest preserve tournament held Sunday on the 325 foot jump at Palos Park Hills. It was estimated by some authorities that 38,000 witnessed the meet.

A leap of 103 feet and 17.81 points gave Caspar Oimen, St. Paul Municipal Ski club, the class B title. Matt Heikenen turned in a jump of 112 feet, the longest of the day, but was unable to gather enough points to capture high honors.

The slide, one of the most difficult to ride in the country, extends 125 feet up on the top of Swallow Hill, which is extended 200 feet skyward making the complete fall a distance of 325 feet.

In the women's exhibition event, Miss Loraine Matson of Chicago won with a point total of 17.25. Miss S. Stromstad was second with 16.99. Form and Lead-off was counted in the women's event, distance not being considered.

In the meet Sunday four countries were represented; America, Norway, Sweden and Ireland.

Sinners in Heaven

PART FOUR—Continued

"I killed him? I killed Babooma—a man?"

Swiftly he closed her lips with his own, with quick perception of the effects which renewed civilization might have had upon the primitive instincts aroused on the island.

"I owe my very life to you, wife of my heart," he whispered.

But his reflections were misplaced.

"Thank God!" she cried unexpectedly.

"I would still kill anybody—any day—who attempted to hurt you."

"Nom de Dieu!" he echoed the Frenchman. "Our life will be a checkered career."

Then Barbara fully recognized once more the old Alan of flesh and blood, deep moods and light banter, poetic idealism and prompt action—deliciously human, warm with love and life. She suddenly laughed, the bewildered sense of shock falling from her—the first real spontaneous laugh of many weeks.

"Alan! Alan! Nothing matters but the fact that you are here—alive! But I can't understand it all. How was such a mistake made?"

"Very easily. Because De Borceau didn't, of course, know friend from foe! Things were going all right with us. But when one of the devils set fire to the hut and the friendly spear knocked me out, De Borceau naturally thought all was up. Some of Babooma's lot tried to reach you, but Roowa frustrated them. Then De Borceau was staunch to his oath. He fought anybody who came near you, like a medieval knight, and carried you off to safety. Poor Roowa thought he had stolen you from me, and nearly went mad!" He laughed reminiscently.

"But you? What happened to you? The expedition searched the island. And what became of the De Borceaus when they returned?"

He sank into the big armchair, still clasping her in his arms. "It's quite a fairy story. You remember the wood in the east—where, that first Christmas day?"

"Every leaf!" she breathed.

He smiled into her eyes.

"But not every moss-covered rock. In that wood was a very cleverly concealed entrance to a subterranean passage leading to a kind of vault. This narrowed down into another outlet—quite impassable—on the shore, which allowed a little fresh air and glimmers of light. This cave was tabu. In happier days, when the tribe was sufficiently self-supporting—to provide its own meat, the condemned dinner was—well, we need not go into details! But that cave was supposed to be haunted by the spirits of past feasts. Nobody liked to speak of it, or go near it. When I was considered dead, our friends, very naturally, carried off my bleeding corpse."

"Oh, don't!" cried the girl who had suffered so much from this well-meaning act. She buried her face on his shoulder.

After a lucid interval he resumed his narrative.

"When they realized you had been 'stolen' and I was still alive, the fear arose that the 'bird of ill omen' would return and make off with me, too! So, to insure my safety—that was the irony of it all—they raised the tabu and hid me in the cave. Only Roowa was courageous enough to enter with food. I was knocked out for some time. When I recovered—Barbara! Can you possibly imagine my feelings upon discovering that the rescue party had come and gone? I was raving mad! The poor beggars had done it for the best and were bewildered. Nothing would convince them that the white men were my friends. I spent what seemed years of agony, doubtful if any further help would come. My only hope lay in you."

"In me?"

"I thought you would persuade De Borceau or somebody to try again, not rest content."

"I wanted to come myself," she cried. "I implored and threatened—Oh! everybody was so pig-headed. But what happened to De Borceau?"

"As soon as the plane's arrival was known the whole tribe raced pell-mell to the shore and burned it to cinders. I found the brothers hiding for their life in the forest." He gave an irrepressible bubble of laughter. "They—literally—fell from the trees upon my neck! We have been kissing each other's hands or faces ever since. So, again, nothing remained but to wait and hope. I thought at least a missionary party would turn up. That second expedition was infernally slow!"

He laid his cheek impulsively down upon hers. "But De Borceau could give me news of you. He told me everything—about Singapore."

Her lips trembled, a little, to his.

"And," she whispered, "it!"

"And it!" His arms tightened.

"And—other things. I insisted. He acted loyally—for us both, Barbara. But—by heaven!—It made my gorge rise to know what you were facing—the inferences, the—And there I was, powerless as a stranded infant to help you."

"It was—h—l!" she murmured briefly. "Have you heard?"

"Madge told me everything. She got the news of our rescue almost directly after you left London! I came home like the very devil—by sea, air, and land—to find you had disappeared—gone to break your little heart alone, where I couldn't find you—"

"I had to come away, Alan. I was in a turmoil—"

"My Barbara, don't I understand!"

Suddenly his eyes blazed in their old way; and he dashed an arm upon the table, causing the flame of the lamp to jump.

"Those blighted Pharisees! Those d—d, gossiping—"

"Oh, my dear!" She laughed again at this familiar vehemence.

"I went to Darbury," he explained briefly.

Her laughter fled. "You went to Darbury, Alan?" She glanced apprehensively into his grim face. "What—what happened?"

He remained silent for a moment, then met her eyes with a smile.

"Well . . . No deaths occurred."

"Did—did a mother—say—?"

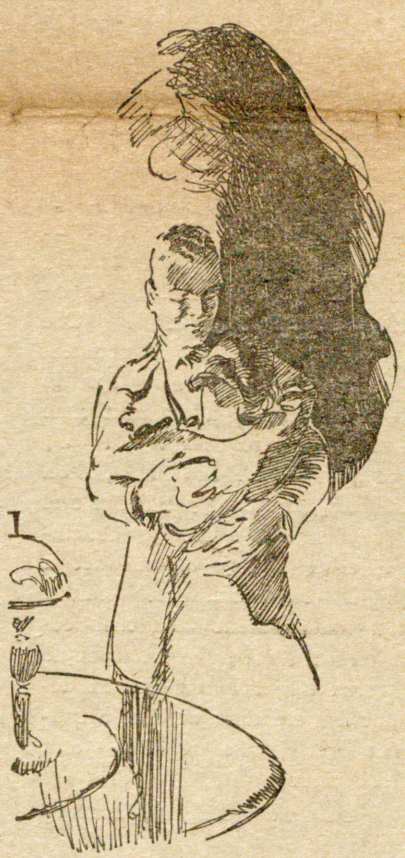

"There was a very fine, candid interchange of opinion! I honestly tried to reconcile your mother, but"—he gave one of his old careless shrugs—"she considers herself disgraced, and talks darkly of being obliged to leave Darbury. . . . I saw Rochdale, too—"

Barbara raised her head again. "Ah! Dear old Hugh! He has been—splendid, Alan. His friendship—his struggle to—to—believe—" Her voice quavered.

"I know. And he, of everybody concerned, might with justness have condemned—"

They fell silent awhile, each knowing, by their own joy, what it all meant to the friend who had lost. . . .

A realization of what this return would mean to Mrs. Field combined with her own overwhelming joy to draw from the very depths of her heart a voiceless prayer met thanks-giving. In the luminous, darkened eyes that met her own, she saw the same look of almost reverent awe. Never had he seemed so gloriously alive, so radiant in spirit. Again she raised her hands to feel the features she had never thought to see again; then drew the dear head, with passionate tenderness, down to her breast, and clasped it there. . . .

To both of them, beneath the superficial lightness of talk, this hour equalled in sacredness that of their marriage morning in the dawn. But this held in it, also, the half-fearful joy of a resurrection. The past darkness, with the struggle toward the light, had left ineffaceable marks upon each soul. . . .

"Can't we go back to the island?" she whispered at last.

"Some day." He raised his head and smiled. "We'll retire there, now and then, and live it all again! But our first jaunt is to Australia. I've been commissioned to rebuild the old bus. There's been an awful lot of interviewing and publicity since I got back ten days ago—"

"Only ten days! And you've been to Darbury—"

"That's not all."

He looked at her with eyes which held something of their old inscrutability.

"Your relations showed unflattering surprise at what they termed my 'constancy' now we are rescued. Oh, lord!"

"They would!" she cried, with indignation.

"The fear that we meant brazenly to defy the English law possessed them. They besought me to marry you 'properly, in a church.' Your aunt particularly insisted upon a Protestant church—not a registry office, or chapel."

"Just like Aunt Mary!" She laughed

rather bitterly. "I couldn't feel—more married," she added, with the quick shy look he loved.

His gray eyes darkened; with a little catch of the breath his arms tightened. "There's one thing, therefore, which bold bad barons must have in their pockets when they chase their victims to Darbury, to prove their good intent."

"What is that?"

"A special license. I know a parson near here. We haven't met for eight years; but I wired this morning to tell him we should arrive at his church to be married tomorrow—"

"My dear whirlwind!" she gasped.

He bent, with his old violent suddenness, and caught her up so close she could scarcely breathe. All the old passionate, dominating love, which had so often swept her away, poured forth and surrounded her; so that, panting and glorying, her individuality, after all its lonely travail, once more transfused, transformed into his own.

"So," he whispered, "we must have another wedding, my Beloved! But it cannot be more beautiful—more real—than the other in the dawn—"

"With a little sobbing, tremulous sigh, she clung close. . . . "If we had one every year, in every land and every tongue," she murmured whimsically, "they would all seem beautiful to me."

The landlady discreetly entered at last to lay the supper. She cast one comprehensive glance at the armchair, and her smiling face grew more radiant.

"We are to be married in the morning," Alan remarked.

Cornish people take life calmly. They do not lose their heads or forget their duties in any crisis.

"Yes, sir!" Mrs. Treguthen agreed brightly. "I'm sure I do hope you will both be happy. And—will you have eggs to breakfast, sir—or bacon?"

"Both—please!"

They smiled at each other when she left the room.

"Somebody must feed us," he observed, passing his fingers through her curly hair. "Every little note has its niche."

Hugh sat long over a lonely breakfast, a few days later. The "old people" were away. The London paper, with its list of marriages, lay upon the table before him; but he stared away absently, through the window, without turning the page. . . .

Presently, with gun and dogs, he stepped out into the raw February air, turning aimlessly down a lane. . . . An hour later, followed closely by six puzzled brown eyes, he walked slowly up the pathway in the little wood where—aeons ago—he and Barbara had discussed their honeymoon. The gun still rested unused within his arm, the cartridges untouched within their bag. . . .

Underfoot, the fir needles lay soft and damp with here and there frosts of sodden dead bracken drooping upon them. The tall pines swayed a little, whispering their everlasting, murmurous song; dropping, sometimes, splashes from their wet leaves, like tears, upon the dreariness below. All the world appeared gloomy, dead, sorrowful. It seemed impossible that, soon, the sap would run in the tall trees, the young green shoot forth upon the hedges, spring—with its fresh myriad life—awake with the "singing of birds."

The unloaded gun dropped unheeded to the ground. . . . The six brown eyes questioned one another wonderingly; then looked back at the tweed-clad figure lying face downward, with head buried in his arms. . . . At last Shag, Hugh's favorite terrier, ever the most tender-hearted of friends, approached cautiously; sniffed; then gently licked what was visible of a much-loved cheek.

(THE END.)

Famous Old Church

This year sees the three hundred and sixty-fourth anniversary of the demolition of the magnificent Church of St. John at Perth, the restoration of which is now contemplated.

This is without doubt one of the most interesting churches in Scotland, says the Weekly Edinburgh Scotsman. Tradition ascribes its foundation to the Picts, but, whoever founded it, it is one of the earliest stone churches built in the country; and, in the Twelfth and Thirteenth centuries, as evinced both by ancient documents and by the surviving remnants of the edifice of that time, it was magnificent and extensive. The monk of Dunfermline, to whom it was granted, allowed it to fall into disrepair—a state of affairs which Robert the Bruce set about remedying, but the restoration was stayed by his death.

Odd Quail in Borneo

The long, hairy, reddish crest gives the moderately sized, rich green plumaged greenwood quail a distinguished appearance, says Nature Magazine. In its native haunts, from Siam to Borneo and Java, it is a lover of the tropical forest up to an altitude of 4,000 feet, and seldom visits the open country.

TRENCH WARFARE

IF ALL this stuff about germs is true, how does it happen that anybody is alive?

The question is a perfectly fair one and its answer makes a strange and wonderful story. If we are, at all times, surrounded by these invisible carriers of death, why isn't everybody dead? Because of the ability to resist and overcome disease which the human body has acquired in past ages. But how does the body defend itself against its outside enemies? Very much the same as the nation defends itself against invaders.

The body, in health, is like a nation at peace. There is no excitement, no disturbance. The body is made up of millions of cells, just as the nation is made up of millions of people. But when everything is peaceful, each cell goes about its own business. The red blood cells go about their business of carrying traffic, hauling oxygen into the cells and hauling carbon dioxide out to be dumped, traveling on the main roads and paths formed by the arteries and veins.

On the roads are found a few policemen, in the form of white blood cells, sauntering along the roads, keeping the peace and watching for the stray criminal. But the reserves are in the barracks in the bone marrow, the spleen and the lymph glands. Any occasional invader can be taken care of by the police.

But suddenly an important position in the lungs is captured by a strong force of tuberculous germs. They at once begin to increase in numbers, living off of the surrounding country and throwing poison gas into the body in the form of the toxins or poisons which they make.

Then the order for mobilization is issued and the reserves rush out of their barracks and down the roads to the point of attack. If they are strong enough, they drag the invaders out, carry them to the frontier and throw them out of the country. If they can't do this, they do just what the Allies did in Flanders. They "dig in" and throw up a wall around the invading force to keep them from spreading. Just the same thing, only in France it was called a "line of defense" and in the body it is called an "inflammatory reaction." Finally, the white cells build barbed wire entanglements in front of the trenches to surround the enemy, only they are called connective tissue formations.

Then the white-celled troops, like the French, say: "They shall not pass."

CHICKENS AND SUNLIGHT

MUCH has been said in these columns about sunlight. This is not strange when one considers that more attention has been paid to sunlight by scientific men all over the world in the last five years than has been given to the subject in the preceding century. It almost seems as though the sun was a recent discovery and that no one had known of its existence until recently. Today we are beginning to realize that the sun, at least so far as our universe is concerned, is literally and actually the center and source of all life. We can understand now why the old Persian magi or wise men worshiped the sun as the greatest power and source of good in the universe.

But perhaps this hasn't interested you. "All this stuff about ultra-violet rays is just another case of those scientific fellows talking about something nobody can see and that probably doesn't exist." Maybe even the newly discovered fact that sunlight, plain everyday sunlight, will change a pale, thin, rickety child into a plump, rosy, healthy one doesn't interest you either. "Another of those doctor's fads. Nothing in it."

All right. Then maybe you will be interested in chickens. Now there's something practical. If you can raise chickens that are bigger, fatter, heavier and that will sell for more in the market, now that's really talking. That's practical.

Very well, let's talk about chickens, then. Prof. E. B. Hart of the Wisconsin state agricultural station took two healthy chickens of the same age and variety. He put them on exactly the same diet. One chicken was exposed to direct sunlight for half an hour each day. The other was kept out of the sunlight entirely. At the end of four weeks, the bird that had had the proper food with sunlight had gained 148 per cent in weight and had grown proportionately, while the chick that had had proper food but no sunshine had only gained 23 per cent. Half an hour of sunshine a day had made one bird grow six times as fast as the other!

Then Professor Hart tried another experiment. He took two groups of chickens of the same size, age and stock. He fed both groups on a diet that would ordinarily produce rickets. One group got ten minutes of sunshine a day. The other group got sunshine all day. At the end of six weeks the ten-minute group all had rickets and the all-day group were all healthy and averaged 50 per cent more weight than the others. The sunshine kept them healthy in spite of poor food.

A Sensible Precept for Saved People

By REV. JOHN C. PAGE
Teacher of Bible Doctrine, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—Faithful is the saying, and concerning these things I desire that thou affirm confidently, to the end that they who have believed God may be careful to maintain good works.—Titus 3:8 (R. V.).

Many descriptive words and phrases are used in the Bible to designate God's people and distinguish them from the world. Such phrases as these are found—"the children of light," "the children of the day," "a purchased people," and "a people of God's own possession." The descriptive words are those of "believers," "disciples," "followers," and "Christians." Here in the text they are described as "they who have believed God." This indicates not merely a general belief in God, but a belief in Him as He has revealed Himself in Christ, the God of redemptive grace and power. God has given to this world a testimony, to which the apostle John refers in the fifth chapter and the ninth verse of his first epistle: "If we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater; for the witness of God is this, that he hath borne witness concerning his Son. He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in him; he that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he hath not believed in the witness that God hath borne concerning his Son. And the witness is this, that God gave unto us eternal life, and this life is his Son. He that hath not the Son of God hath not the life." They that have thus believed God should be careful to maintain good works. This is the argument of the text.

The word "careful" is a word of admonition and warning. It is a word of common usage today. In the face of possible danger a mother warns her child to be careful. When the son leaves home for some distant field of learning or of labor this same word of caution is frequently spoken. At the beginning of some business venture, when the savings of years are to be invested in some new enterprise, how often the thrifty wife will say to her husband, "Be careful." So here in the text God speaks to His children in the familiar words, "Be careful." "They who have believed God must be careful to maintain good works." The word "maintain" means "to keep to the forefront." The full force of the admonition is seen when we read the text in the light of its true meaning. "They who have believed God must be careful to keep to the forefront good works." We are always confronted with the possibility of mistakes, failures, misuse of time and talent. This involves serious loss, hence, the necessity of this admonition given to all Christian believers.

There is a reasonable basis for this requirement. First, good works are the expression of true faith. God justifies us by faith. We must justify Him before the world by good works. The one is the necessary result of the other. As Luther declared, we are justified by faith alone, but justifying faith is never alone. Paul and James both agree to this, emphasis in the one case being placed on faith, and the other on works. "To him that worketh not but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness." "As the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also." No amount of profession will in itself suffice; the world wants to see the real thing. Concerning our Lord Himself, it is written that "He went about doing good." The world rightly expects this kind of life from His followers. "They who have believed God must be careful to maintain good works," because they are the practical expression of a living and saving faith.

Good works not only express faith, but they lead to its perfection. This is a New Testament argument found in the epistle of James. Abraham's faith was tested when he was called to offer up his son. He stood the test and was obedient to the call. Although Isaac did not actually pass through death, he was truly and fully given up by his father. Abraham had the consciousness of obedience to God and that sense of the divine approval which always follows obedience. In this act of obedience his faith was made perfect or brought to maturity. Abraham is the great example of faith, but his life was full of good works.

Once more, we must be careful to keep good works to the forefront because through them God is glorified. "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven." The world wants to see as well as hear. We speak in Bible terms of the great truths of our Christian faith, but many there are who do not understand our speech. There is need to translate truth into a language that can be understood, the language of good works, of human sympathy and kindness, of helpfulness and Christian love. This is always understood. Men see the truth operating in action and glorify the Father who is in heaven.

Diagram Showing How to Install the UX 112 Tube, Using Storage "A" Battery.

This Diagram Shows the Dry Cell Tube Set Rewired for UX 120 Power Tube.

The superior quality of reception obtainable with loud volume by the substitution of UX 112 and UX 120 tubes for UV 201-A and UV 199 tubes, respectively, in the last stage of audio-frequency amplification, makes their installation of interest to every owner of a receiver having two or more stages of audio-frequency amplification. Several important changes must be made in the wiring of the receiving set to adapt the circuits and power supply to the needs of the new tubes.

The UX 112 is the big brother of the UV 201-A tube. The filament current consumption of the new tubes is half an ampere, only double that of the economical UV 201-A. To secure satisfactory results with the UX 112 tube, 135 volts of plate potential are required, as compared with 90 volts usually used with the UV 201-A. Furthermore, unless the 9 volt "C" battery is used in connection with it, the UX 112 is a heavy user of "B" battery current and distorts considerably. By the addition of the "C" battery, however, a large size "B" battery can power this tube for a year or more. It is not necessary to use an extra large or heavy duty size "B" battery for furnishing the extra 45 volts required by this tube.

The method of connecting an extra 45 volt "B" battery is as follows: (1) Examine the socket which holds the tube used in the final stage of amplification and identify the plate terminal, usually marked "P." (2) Disconnect the wire attached to this terminal. (3) Connect the positive terminal of the new extra 45 volt "B" battery to the plate socket terminal. (4) Connect the negative terminal of the new "B" battery with the wire which you have just disconnected from the plate socket terminal. This gives a total voltage of 135 volts on the UX 112 tube, but it does not increase the plate voltage of the UV 201-A tube in the first stage of audio-frequency amplification.

Adding the Extra "C" Battery. A somewhat similar method is pursued in adding the extra 4½ volt "C" battery. The new "C" battery is connected in series with the one already installed; the existing connections of the latter with the first stage of amplification are not disturbed. The secondary of the second audio-frequency transformer, however, is disconnected from the -4½ volt terminal of the original "C" battery, a new lead being run from that secondary terminal to -9 volt terminal of the new "C" battery.

For dry cell tube sets using UV 199 tubes, the new UX 120 is used in the last stage. This also requires 135 volts plate potential obtainable from a large size "B" battery. The same instructions for connecting the extra 45 volt "B" battery for the UX 112 apply to the UX 120.

The UX 120 requires a 22½ volt "C" battery. Substitute for your present "C" battery a 22½ volt tapped "B" battery made up of large size cells. This assures you of long shelf life. There is practically no current withdrawn from the "C" battery, and consequently, its usefulness is determined by its shelf life.

A "C" battery is connected in the reverse direction as compared with a "B" battery. The "B" battery is connected with the plus to the plate and the minus toward the filament. The "C" battery, on the other hand, is connected with the negative terminal toward the grid and the +22½ volts to the filament. The full voltage of the battery is impressed upon the grid if the grid return is made to the minus connection of the battery, since its plus lead is connected with

Lesson for January 31

JESUS FEEDS FIVE THOUSAND MEN

LESSON TEXT—John 6:1-14; 32-37.
GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life: he that cometh to Me shall never hunger, and he that believeth on Me shall never thirst.—John 6:35.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Feeds Many Hungry People.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Is Helped by a Boy.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Feeds a Hungry Crowd.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Why People Follow Jesus.

I. Jesus' Compassion for the Multitude (vv. 1-4. Cf. Matt. 14:4).
The sight of a crowd always excited the Lord's sympathy. He knew that they were as sheep without a shepherd, and he was so ignorant that they had no appreciation of Him. Added to this was their physical hunger. This condition aroused the Savior's pity. This is true of the multitude today. Sin had so thoroughly blinded them that they are not conscious of their lost condition.

II. Jesus' Conference With the Disciples Touching the People's Need (vv. 5-9).

This was not done for His benefit, for He knew what He would do (v. 6). His object may be summed up as follows:

1. To Teach Them Their Sense of Obligation to the Multitude.
2. To Teach Them Their True Helplessness in the Face of Such Great Needs.

The loaves and fishes were as nothing in the presence of five thousand men, besides women and children. Well might Andrew exclaim, "What are these among so many?" We may plant and water, but the increase entirely comes from God.

3. To Teach Them That Their Sufficiency Is From the Lord.

Without Him we can do nothing (John 15:1-8). Christians can no more carry on the Lord's work of themselves than the branch can bear fruit without the vine. The branch supplies the life and strength for the production of fruit. Philip's arithmetic was of no use in the face of such need. Jesus has all power, nothing is too hard for Him.

III. The Lord's Method of Accomplishing His Work (vv. 10-13).
Observe here the orderliness of Christ's work. He paused to give thanks for the scant supply, teaching us that we should always bring our abilities and gifts to God that He might bless them to His use.

1. The Lord's Part Was to Bless and Break the Bread, Even to Create the Needed Supply.

The disciples could not perform this part. The same kind of bread was provided for all, rich and poor, young and old, women and children.

2. The Disciples' Part Was to Distribute That Which He Had Passed and Consecrated.

This is true of the Christian worker today. Our part is to take from the hands of the Lord that which He has blessed and consecrated, and distribute it among the starving multitudes. We are not responsible for the supply, but are responsible for its distribution to all those who are hungry and perishing for the Bread of Life.

3. The People's Part Was to Sit Down and Eat.

They had no part in the provision, neither in its distribution, but only to take from the hands of the disciples and eat that which the Lord had provided. This is exactly our situation. The people are responsible for the taking and eating of the Bread of Life; faith with obedience is their part. This is an illustration of the part obedience plays in our salvation.

IV. The Effect of This Miracle (v. 14).

The people recognized Him at once as the prophet who should come. They believed Him for His works' sake.

V. Jesus, the Bread of Life (vv. 32-37).

1. What Bread Is to the Body, Christ Is to the Soul.

Bread is a staple food. It is necessary for the body. One never tires of it. Even so it is with Christ.

2. How to Obtain This Bread.

It is by coming to Christ and believing on Him.

3. The Blessed Issue of Taking This Bread.

The one who eats this bread shall never hunger, nor thirst. Hunger and thirst return after partaking of natural bread and water—not so with those who have partaken of Christ.

Ardent Prayer

As well might we expect vegetation to spring from the earth without the sunshine and the dew, as the Christian to unfold his grace and advance in his course without patient, persevering, ardent prayer.—J. Abbott.

Sin's Ending

There is more bitterness in sin's ending than there ever was sweetness in its acting. If you see nothing but good in its commission, you will suffer only woe in its conclusion.

Loosen Up That Cold With Musterole

Have Musterole handy when a cold starts. It has all of the advantages of grandmother's mustard plaster WITH-OUT the blister. Apply it with the fingers. You feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Made of pure oil of mustard and other simple ingredients, Musterole is recommended by many nurses and doctors. Try Musterole for bronchitis, sore throat, stiff neck, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, croup, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pains and aches of the back or joints, sore muscles, sprains, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest. It may prevent pneumonia and "flu."

Better than a mustard plaster

Now It's Short-Skirt Flu

A new disease known as "short-skirt flu" is raging in London, England. The victim suffers with chills which are often followed by rheumatism in the knee and hip joints. The sufferers are all women who wear the fashionable scanty skirts in spite of the winter weather. Doctors claim that this year's styles expose women to illness more than ever. They advise wearing warm knickers with the short flowing skirts.

A Lady of Distinction

Is recognized by the delicate, fascinating influence of the perfume she uses. A bath with Cuticura Soap and hot water to thoroughly cleanse the pores followed by a dusting with Cuticura Talcum powder usually means a clear, sweet, healthy skin.—Advertisement.

DO UNTO OTHERS

Paying your bills promptly is one of the best ways to follow the GOLDEN RULE.

First ---- in fairness to the merchant or professional man who has invested cash and time in the merchandise or service you have received, you should reciprocate the favor of credit by taking care of your obligations in reasonable time.

Your merchant or professional man does not require security. He demands no interest---yet he is actually loaning you cash

Second --- in fairness to your own good name and reputation, your bills should be paid on time.

You are granted credit according to your past record. Your character is the basis for confidence in your ability to pay.

Do your part. Pay your bills promptly. If you can't pay all at once, pay half or whatever you can and see to it that your creditor knows you are playing the game square.

That's one way we can all add to the good name of Oak Lawn.
